Experienced Women Advise Mother's Friend

Because it is so perfectly safe to use and has been of such great help to a host of expectant mothers, these women, experienced in this most happy period, advise the use of "Mother's Friend."

Applied externally to the abdominal muscles its purpose is to relieve the undue tension upon the cords and ligaments resulting from muscular expansion. Beneath the surface is a network of fine nerve threads and the gentle, soothing embrocation, "Mother's Friend," is designed to so lubricate the muscular fibres as to avoid the unnecessary and continuous nagging upon this myriad of nerves. Applied to the breasts it affords the proper massage to prevent caking.

There is scarcely a well-stocked drug store anywhere but what you can easily obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" and in nearly every town and village is a grandma who herself used it in earlier years. Expectant mothers are urged to try this splendid salve.

"Mother's Friend" has been prepared by Bradford Regulator Co., 310 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for nearly half a century. Send for valuable little book to expectant mothers.

PANACEA FOR ALLEGED TIGHT MONEY BUGABOO

Guy Bates Post Declares Wide-open Purges Make It Go and Come.

Overcautionousness is the bugaboo that has attacked the general public's purse according to Guy Bates Post, the actor who so ably interprets the imaginative Omar Khayyam in "Omar" the Tent-maker, at the Belasco Theater this week.

"Overcautionousness will make business men draw their purse strings so tight that no money may escape and then they discover that no money can either get in," Mr. Bates laughed and tightened his Persian whisker strings at the back of his neck.

"My personal experience with the tight money proposition is only the talk about it. I have just come from the most successful tour of the West and nowhere have I noticed that the theater suffered because of the European war which hard time critics claim to be the cause of the so-called shortage of money.

"And I would find it utterly impossible to think hard times in beautiful Washington," said the actor. "The streets are thronged with handsomely gowned women, the shops are busy and prosperous looking and the theater which would be the first place to suffer, has enjoyed splendid audiences. I could never be depressed in Washington."

A possible prevention for the oncoming stringency, which Mr. Post declares that some few pessimists insist will attack the country, is suggested by the actor, who says:

"Let every business man spend money as if no great bugaboo were hanging over his head. Forget the hard time scores. Spend the money out and it will return doubled."

"But, of course, the business man may say, 'Let to the impractical actor who lives in the land of imagination and enchantment.' I do that, but for what? Not only for art's sake, but because I want something in my purse to use again, and when a business man will spend two dollars to be drawn with me into the make-believe land, why shouldn't I swap a business idea or two with him along the way?"

Whether Mr. Post was always the keen philosopher, even before he and Omar became one, or short acquaintance did not teach, but from the conversation of a clear sighted modern business man he turned and walked onto the stage to harter in the Persian marts and left me wishing in the wings of the theater that the business men whose tongues war hard times could have heard him.
